The Urban Dictionary T-Shirt In the 1980's, a while before Nintendo came up with the Gameboy, a student of mine was fond of playing with a toy robot, called "Robotron". The Robotron had an ARM7 microprocessor in it and was basically a video game. The game was pretty simple, and I won't bore you with the details, but you basically made a TV-like screen and had a robot move around to the right. At the bottom of the screen was a speedbar, where the player could adjust the "run" speed of the robot. At the end of the game, you would input the total amount of time spent to figure out how many seconds the robot had spent at the top of the screen. This is a brief explanation of how Speedrunner works. Speedrun is a subset of speedmodding, which means adjusting games and speedrunning are not things you want to do at a co-op game like Bomberman, but when you are playing a single player game and the opponent is not human, it can be fun to out run him.
